

Total Awareness

(Infant edition...)

Led by
Chiara Tru Loh-Burnett

With special thanks to William James...

In the PRINCIPLES OF PSYCHOLOGY (1890), the psychologist and philosopher William James characterized the experiential life of the infant in the following terms:

In the PRINCIPLES OF PSYCHOLOGY (1890), the psychologist and philosopher William James characterized the experiential life of the infant in the following terms:

“The baby, assailed by eyes, ears, nose, skin, and entrails at once, feels it all as one great blooming, buzzing confusion...”

In the PRINCIPLES OF PSYCHOLOGY (1890), the psychologist and philosopher William James characterized the experiential life of the infant in the following terms:

“The baby, assailed by eyes, ears, nose, skin, and entrails at once, feels it all as one great blooming, buzzing confusion...”

“The baby, assailed by eyes, ears, nose, skin, and entrails at once, feels it all as one great blooming, buzzing confusion...”

[on the first bell]

I.

Close your eyes, and *REGRESS

[bell]

II.

Open your eyes, and
*FEEL IT ALL AT ONCE

[bell]

(Take a few notes....)

THANK YOU!